

Planning Past Unconscious Bias in Arbitration

Audience reaction to our December seminar was enthusiastic. We learned how unconscious bias develops, promotes “group think” and inhibits diversity. Today’s challenge is to generate ideas and tactics for recognizing our own biases and working with those of others. By popular demand, supported by Arbitration Place, the Toronto Commercial Arbitration Society, the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators (Canada Branch), ICC Canada, and the CPR Institute, ArbitralWomen invites you to join us in an interactive Sequel Seminar to create new ways to promote diversity in arbitration.

Facilitated by arbitration practitioners and diversity consultants, participants will explore ways to deal with unconscious bias and encourage inclusiveness in the decision-making of counsel, parties, and arbitrators alike. Attendees – both men and women – will collaborate to develop strategies for moving from unconscious bias to conscious realization. To contribute to the discussion, registrants will receive a brief survey to complete and bring to the seminar.

After the seminar, join us for a reception at Arbitration Place, hosted by generous sponsors Blakes, Osler, and Torkin Manes.
